

CRUEL CRIME.

Evidence of a Dark Deed Turned Up at Louisville.

Head Crushed and Other Marks on a Young Woman's Corpse.

Taken From the Ohio River Opposite That City—The Woman Probably Murdered and the Body Thrown Into the Rapids of the Falls.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 13.—Marks of a double crime have been found on the body of the woman washed ashore at Willow Point, Ind., opposite this city, and identified as the remains of Mary Lengel, a former chambermaid of Eckert's hotel, this city. The original theory was suicide. After the police and detective departments of the two cities had dropped the case a reporter found the woman had been outraged and murdered by two men.

Four boys, Walter Farrel, James Morrison, Chas. Heltzsch and Wilbur Smith, saw two men drag a woman through Hyde Park, a suburb of Jeffersonville, late Saturday night, outrage her near the river bank, beat her and then drag her to the bar below the Pennsylvania bridge, where they left the woman screaming as blows were rained down on her head. One of the men wore a dark, stubby beard, a derby hat, black coat and vest and a light pair of trousers. The boys were so frightened that they were afraid to talk until last night, when one of them recognized a picture of the dead woman in a daily paper as being that of the woman they had seen in the hands of the two men. A trip to the river shows evidence of a desperate struggle, and the woman's fan was found there. The men probably killed the woman and then hurled the body into the rapids of the falls. The head was crushed in, and this is thought to have been caused by the body striking the rocks.

AN ELECTRIC STORM.

Telegraph Wires From the Atlantic to the Pacific Partly Disabled for a Time.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—For several hours Friday the telegraph wires throughout the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Gulf of Mexico to the lakes, showed the effects of powerful electric influences, similar to the influences observed during the bright manifestations of the aurora borealis, or northern lights. For three hours during the middle of the day it was with the greatest difficulty that the telegraph wires could be worked to any part of the country. Even the Atlantic cables were not exempt. All telegraphic communication is consequently delayed, although the Western Union Telegraph Co. is bringing to bear every accessory known to art and science to combat the mysterious influences of the aurora borealis.

KENTUCKY BANKERS.

Important Meeting of the Association to Be Held in Lexington.

The Kentucky Bankers' Association will meet in Lexington October 4th. This meeting is regarded as the most important that the bankers of the state have ever held, says The Louisville Times. The new Constitution effected many changes in the banking system, and the laws enacted will receive careful consideration. The new law creates a Bureau of Banking, at the head of which is a special Commissioner, the functions of whose office are similar to that of the Controller of Currency at Washington.

Thomas L. Barrett of Louisville is president of the association. The Executive Committee, which is composed of some of the leading bankers of the state, has selected John W. Mathews of New Castle to deliver the address on the subject of bank examinations.

The association was organized in Louisville October 21st, at a general meeting of the bankers of the state. Thomas L. Barrett was elected President. C. C. McClary was chosen Secretary and E. Palmer of Paducah was elected Treasurer.

The association was formed in order to promote the general welfare and usefulness of banks and banking institutions, to cultivate more intimate social and business relations between the members, to collect and disseminate valuable financial and economical information affecting their common interests, to secure unity and co-operation in the furtherance of legitimate and conservative banking, and for the purpose of correct information as to the functions of banks, and their relations to the commercial, industrial interests of the state.

A PAPER published at Nogales, Ariz., has the following: "A shrewd Yankee recently arrived there, and was convinced that his opportunity lay in the high price of eggs, so he erected a large henhouse exactly across the Mexican boundary line. The hens ate the grain in Mexico and then walked across the line into the United States to lay their eggs. The Yankee is making money fast."

The experiment last year is said to have worked well in bringing the Postmasters at small places in relations with Postmasters of larger experience, and thereby improving the postal service.

THE CLOSE.

Members of Parliament Crowded the Galleries.

A More Earnest Situation Never Seen Before in that Chamber.

Gladstone's Success Claimed to Be Parnell's Also—The Grand Old Man Will Kiss the Queen's Hand and Organize a New Government.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The Daily News, describing the scene in parliament Thursday, said:

"The members crowded the galleries, sat in pairs on the steps of the gangway, swarmed around the speaker's chair and stood in a dense throng at the bar. It was a magnificent audience, and Mr. Chamberlain played upon it with the skill of a master of parliamentary debate. He commenced his speech in a studiously quiet manner. Referring to Mr. Healy's action at the adjournment of the house on Tuesday, in the gentlest tones, he said he noted that whenever it was desired to exhibit discourtesy toward any man or to any woman, he added, after a significant pause, Healy presents himself to accomplish it. This house was hugely delighted at Mr. Chamberlain's pun—that Labouchere be called upon to reconcile the interests of the cabinet with the interests of truth. Mr. Chamberlain's peroration was delivered with much more appearance of passion than he usually permits himself to show. When Sir Henry James asked whether Bright and Villiers were apostates, or whether those were who, to gain place and power, changed their principles, he turned and angrily pointed at Mr. Gladstone, whereat the conservatives loudly cheered, while Mr. Gladstone sat silent, probably thinking of how he had, for conscience's sake, in 1880, broke up one of the best majorities of modern times, and had gone forth into the shades of the opposition.

"After a deprecatory shout, leading Right Hon. Henry Chaplain, who was delivering a speech, to resume his seat, the conservatives shouted for Sir William Vernon Harcourt, who only smiled and stroked his chin.

"When Mr. Chaplain had spoken for forty-five minutes Dr. Tanner walked up to him with a glass of water in his hand. Mr. Chaplain, however, took no notice of Dr. Tanner's action, and calmly proceeded with his speech."

The Post: "A sight more earnest or impressive than Friday's scene in parliament has rarely been witnessed within the walls of St. Stephen's. Although defeated, the Unionists will reassemble undiminished in numbers and unfailing in resolution. Mr. Gladstone will have to deal with the strongest and most united minority that ever assembled in parliament."

The Standard (conservative): In the face of challenges from which no body of statesmen with the smallest sense of dignity would venture to flinch, the Gladstonians have sat, uneasily, it is true, but still with closed lips.

The Daily Chronicle (liberal): The single effective point that Mr. Chamberlain made in his speech was that Mr. Gladstone will hold office for six months without defining his policy.

The Pall Mall Gazette (liberal): Mr. Gladstone's triumph is Mr. Parnell's also. Twenty years ago Mr. Parnell had not even entered parliament. Before he died he had converted nine out of ten Irishmen against revolutionary methods. The effect of the division is irrevocable. Difficulties and delays in home rule there may be, but its final adoption is now inevitable.

The St. James Gazette (conservative), under the caption of "Leaping Into Darkness," says: The government was ejected by a majority simply going it blind for the Grand Old Man and a half understood idea.
